Axis cameras featured in Telia HemKoll service

Axis Communications, the market leader within the field of professional video surveillance, announced today that one of the company's network cameras will be included in the Swedish telecom operator TeliaSonera's Telia HemKoll service. The service enables customers to easily monitor their homes or small businesses, even from remote locations.

TeliaSonera's customers will have the opportunity of installing a variant of the network camera AXIS 207W STS in their homes or small businesses. A broadband connection is all that will be needed for installation, allowing users at any time to see what is happening at home or at the business via the Internet or a mobile phone.

"It is interesting to see that network video technology now allows for remote surveillance not only of traditional professional installations, but also at the consumer level," says Ray Mauritsson, President of Axis Communications. "Axis' STS* initiative, which complements Axis' focus on professional installations, addresses this market through partnerships with such operators as TeliaSonera."
