Axis Communications' Academy

Axis Communications leads the way within network video surveillance. From the invention of the network video camera in 1996, to the introduction of the first open platform access control product in 2013, we've gained a lot of knowledge along the way, and we don't believe in keeping that to ourselves.

Axis Communications' Academy was started as a way to share our expertise with anyone wanting to grow in the video surveillance market, regardless of their job function. No matter what you do, your business can benefit from the experience we want to share. Learning with Axis Communications' Academy gives you the confidence you need for success.
