Visitor entry management with physical access control

As a school administrator, you are responsible for everyone who enters and exits your school. And it's a responsibility that you take very seriously. But assigning full-time staff to manage visitors is inefficient, costly, and at times, risky.

At Axis, we contribute to a safer learning environment by providing you and your staff with an efficient and reliable visitor entry management solution that is automated with your video management system, can be controlled remotely, and is easy to use.

You decide who and when

An automated entry management solution gives you better control and situational awareness in your school. AXIS A1001 Network Door Controller leverages your school's existing IP infrastructure to control locks and manage doors. With a robust and intuitive user management feature, you decide who has direct access to certain areas and when. For instance, you may want only your IT administrator to have access to the server room. Or you may want to schedule after hours school access to limited maintenance staff. An automated system also provides you with an audit trail so you have full visibility of all visitor traffic.

Safe and efficient remote access

Dispatching a staff member to physically open a door for visitors is an inefficient use of valuable school resources, and may be putting them in harm's way. This is especially true after school hours when staffing is minimal or non-existent. Using an Axis network video door station for remote entry management is safe, efficient and easy enough for any member of your staff to use in three simple steps:

1. A visitor pushes a button
2. Your staff gets video confirmation of and two-way audio communication with the visitor
3. Your staff member opens the door remotely
